

AMERICA MUST AID, BARUCH DECLARES

Says United States Should Be Moral Leader for Rest of the World.

OPTIMISTIC ON RETURN

Asserts Europe Has Gone to Work but Needs Association of Nations.

Bernard M. Baruch, the banker, who sailed for Europe June 14, after declaring that he was an "incurable optimist," returned yesterday on the French liner France after a close study of affairs in Germany, France and England more optimistic than ever concerning America's state in world affairs.

"But," Mr. Baruch said after summing up his optimism concerning this country, "the world is looking to America more for leadership than for aid, for moral direction rather than mere loans, and I would modify my optimism if I thought that America would not sooner or later take her place in the direction of the affairs of the world."

Mr. Baruch, although refusing to speak definitely of the League of Nations, dwelt very strongly upon the need for peace, and spoke of the necessity of achieving this by an "association of nations."

"This country can no more stand alone than the other nations can stand without us," he said. "There will be no prosperity in the world until there is peace, and there is not peace now. There will be no peace until the German reparations question is settled. That cannot be settled until France gets the security she is entitled to."

"No one can understand the situation who does not know that no Frenchman would dare to do anything that might lead France to a position where there was a possibility of a recurrence of 1870 or the world war. No Frenchman will agree to a peace without real assurance that there will be no recurrence."

Although Mr. Baruch spoke with little interest of Mr. Harding's call for a disarmament conference, dwelling more emphatically upon the need for an association of nations, he said the President was facing great difficulties and it was with ill grace that any one would criticize or attempt to discredit him now.

"Physical disarmament doesn't amount to anything until you disarm the people mentally," he declared. Mr. Baruch was obviously desirous of making it plain that his visit had no significance beyond that of a visit of a personal nature, but he admitted that in London he talked with Lloyd George, Gen. Smuts, Lord Northcliffe, Premier Hughes of Australia and others prominent in the life of the British Empire. In Paris he saw Clemenceau, Briand and others, and in Germany he conferred with Chancellor Wirth, Prof. Bonn, economic expert, and others who are heading the nation.

His tonic for the world was the same.

that every big business man who has visited Europe has advocated work. "There can be no stabilization of exchange until the world gets back to work, to the production and exchange of wealth," he said. "Work, hard work, is the only thing which will bring the world back to the conditions that formerly prevailed. It is slowly coming back now, for the people all over Europe are working."

In his closing words the financier went back to his opening remarks, declaring that there can be no settlement of chaos until France is satisfied by deeds rather than words that she is safe from aggression.

"I don't think the questions of the Rhine and Silesia can be settled without us," he asserted.

SUES TO GET DAUGHTER OUT OF AN INSTITUTION

Stella Macarolla's Mother
Wants Her Help at Home.

Mrs. Amelia Macarolla of 116 Rockaway road, Jamaica, started proceedings in the Supreme Court in Brooklyn to have her daughter Stella, 20, released from the House of the Good Shepherd, where she has been detained six years. According to Mrs. Macarolla's attorney, it is unlawful to keep a girl over 16 years old in the institution.

Stella and her sister Mary, then 8 years old, were sent to institutions in 1915 in Brooklyn's Children's Court on charges of having improper guardianship. In her petition, on which Supreme Court Justice Dike issued an order for the production of the girl in court next Tuesday, Mrs. Macarolla said that Stella is sound and able to earn her own living, and should be helping her mother instead of remaining in an institution to which the mother alludes as a "prison."

B. R. T. PLANS TO END BRIGHTON-CONY JAM

Extra Cars Will Be Added on Two Lines.

The B. R. T. has agreed, at the instance of the Transit Commission, to add one car to each train between Park Row and Lefferts avenue on the elevated line, making these trains six cars. Trains in short line service operating between Grant avenue and Franklin avenue are to be increased from four to five cars.

These steps are taken, it was announced yesterday, to relieve the "bunching" of traffic to and from Brighton Beach and Coney Island. Many passengers use the Franklin avenue station as a transfer point between the Fulton street and Brighton Beach trains, which terminate at this point.

Eastbound trains will now stop further along the eastbound platform at this station on Saturday, Sunday and holiday nights, and a portion of the platform will be roped off to permit those crossing the bridge to the west-bound track to move with less interference.
